LOCAL TAXPAYERS MAY MAKE RETURNS HERE

Although a large number of Torrance property owners have taken advantage of declaring their taxable property to H. E. Siddall, deputy county assessor, who has made his headquarters here, for the past several weeks, there still remains a considerable number who could avail themselves of this local privilege.

Siddall will be at the Chamber of Commerce from 2 to 5 p. m. tomorrow, Friday, and from 5:30 to 8 p. m. at the Alcorn Drug store, corner of Portola avenue and Torrance (Redondo) boulevard to receive tax statements.

Herald Reporter in First Air Venture Flies With Fireman
By BIRDA PADDOCK

Perhaps it was pity because his kind invitations were so decisively declined by the mayor, the chief of police, the city hostess, the city engineer, the city clerk and others—perhaps it was shame at my own cowardice—or maybe it was just carelessness that impelled me one day to promise Allen D. "Ollie" Stevenson, Torrance fireman and flying enthusiast, that some day I would go up with him. For I take second place to no one in my aversion to having even one foot off the ground. I hate ladders, trestles, elevators, and if I could see the golden streets and all the cherubim by just going up to the top of the Los Angeles city hall. To refuse.

Most people tell me with what thrills they anticipate their first trip in the air. My thrills were exactly those of the condemned. After several horrible dreams, I arose Thursday morning, patted my cats good-bye and started for Torrance. On the way I remembered that I had forgotten part of the ritual so I stopped to eat my last meal. You can't tell me condemned murderers really enjoy those chicken or beef-steak feasts they order the last day! They just pretend to because it is the polite custom.

Memories of school days when unprepared I entered examination rooms... days when I waited my turn in the dentist's office while the victim in the chair moaned... of the two-hour ride with a doctor to an eye specialist's office...

WASHINGTON OREGON CALIFORNIA IDAHO MONTANA

... chatting enthusiastically about the World Series while I wondered if there was any chance of my going blind or how long it would be... such memories crowded about me.

Once in Stevenson's car headed for the airport, I cheerfully discussed cremation, cemeteries, man-soleans, and the fearful remains of an auto wreck we passed.

One Last Chance

In such mood I arrived at the airport and submitted to the adjusting of the straps, the goggles over my glasses and the belt around my waist. Nothing left but to throw the switch. Ted Mitchell, owner of the American Eagle 3-place open biplane in which we were going up, gave me one last chance. "If after you get up you don't want to go to Torrance, raise your hand as a signal to Ollie," he said. Ollie Stevenson watched for that signal for miles, and if he had waited for it before coming down, we'd still be up or somewhere—writing this.

Over Culver City, El Segundo, Redondo, Torrance, then to Lomita, back again over Torrance, El Segundo, Gardena, Los Angeles, and Inglewood, moving in another world I gazed at the curious goings and comings on that plane called the earth. Looking to the right I saw the ocean and looking to my left I saw toy houses and buildings, one of which was the Los Angeles city hall. We didn't seem to be up very high (1800 feet) and we moved very slowly (120 miles an hour). The air was just comfortably cold.

Plans Stowaway Trip

What is air-mindedness? I don't know. I wasn't afraid. I wasn't sick; in fact I felt unusually well, but the real thrill and sensation of flying was just the opposite from anything I had ever expected. I expected to feel strange in an unnatural element. Instead the feeling was that of serene comfort in a natural element and the earth seemed the unnatural element. It still does. I'm looking forward to the day when we'll have planes that will fly to other planets and if Ollie Stevenson flies east this summer he'd better look out for a stowaway!

The possibilities of flying haven't been properly advertised. Think of seeing the Grand Canyon without hearing someone gushing a lot of adjectives. Think of souvenir hunters and people who must deface every place they go with their initials, waving clutched fingers and sharpened knives in vain!

Long Time for Woman!

Our thanks to Ted Mitchell, the instructor and his brother Jimmie, who had the plane ready for us, and to Mr. Stevenson, who is one fine pilot. The 33 minutes we were up didn't seem very long. Still that's a long time for a woman to go without talking!

Door-to-Door Freight Plan Is Announced

Lasso Starts New Service April 21; Covers 125 So. Calif. Points

A new northbound and southbound store door delivery and pick-up express freight service between 125 Southern California points and San Francisco, via the Los Angeles Steamship Company, was announced today by Merrill Jacobson, of the Donovan Transportation division of the Southern California Freight Lines at Lomita and Torrance. The new service is effective with the sailing of the Lasso coastwise liner Yale from Los Angeles harbor, Tuesday, April 21.

In connection with bonded franchise motor carriers at Los Angeles harbor, the fast coastwise liners Yale and Harvard will thus provide an overnight door-to-door service at through joint rates. This arrangement is expected to prove of great benefit to Southern California shippers who will for the first time have available a speedy and direct delivery service to their customers in San Francisco. A similar service to include Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley is contemplated for the near future.

The rates for this new service will be all-inclusive and will cover marine insurance and all terminal expense. They will be but slightly higher than the present depot to depot freight rates, which do not include either pick-up or delivery service. A simplified tariff covering the new service is being issued to enable shippers to easily and accurately determine total transportation charges. For the time being, only class rates and a less-than-carload commodity rate on drugs are shown in the tariff, but it is expected that new commodity rates will be added as occasion demands.
